payment. In the legal tender case of Juilliard against Greenman a motion to amend the pleadings was denied.

The chief justice announced that, at the request of litigants in the important tax case of the county of San Mateo vs. the Southern Pacific Railroad company, that case would be restored to its place on the docket to await the hearing of other cases involving the same or nearly the same questions. The other cases are those relating to the state taxation of corporations recently decided by Justice Field in the United States circuit court for the district of California.

INTERVIEWS.

HON, PREDERICK DOUGLASS was found at his residence, on the heights overlooking Anacostia, by a REPUBLICAN reporter last night. In reply to the interrogatory, "What do you think of the civil rights decision?" he said : "It is rather disheartening, and I regard it as a step backward. Justice Harlan takes the ground that the intention of the four-teenth and fifteenth amendments was to prohibit any discrimination in civil rights on account of race, previous condition, &c. I do not think it would be consistent for me to say anything now, although the prempting is strong. The moral effect of the decision will certainly be mischievous. The country was going along smoothly, and the unification of the people was promised. As I understand, the decision only applied to the states, and not to the territorics, District of Columbia, and great water courses of the country. prohibit any discrimination in civil rights on to the territories, District of Columbia, and great water courses of the country.

"At the close of the war, and in view of the services rendered by colored citizons, there was a disposition on the part of the loyal people of the country to concede to them complete citizenship and equal civil rights in the use of all public conveyances and institutions, and I regard the decision, as far as I understand it, as a part of the general reaction naturally following the increased friendship between the north and the south, which comes of the dying out of the old controversy on the subject of slavery. Nearly all the concessions that the colored people have received subject of slavery. Nearly all the concessions that the colored people have received have been the result of the antagonism of the two sections, and as that antagonism vanishes I have expected a partial return of vanishes I have expected a partial return of the old ideas and usages which preceded the war. Ten years ago I told the colored people that as they had gained everything from the enmity growing out of the attempted dissolution of the union between the people of the south and those of the north, it behoved them to inquire what they were likely to lose by the friendship of the two sections. The decision, I take it, is in the direction and interest of the old Calhoun doctrine of state rights as against federal authority. I necessity of the old Camein doctrine of state rights as against federal authority. I do not, however, despair of the ultimate return of the liberal spirit toward the colored people which prevailed immediately after the war. I think the decision in this case has war. I think the decision in this case has resulted largely from confounding social with civil rights. Things which are entirely distinct. There is no such thing as social equality resulting from living in the same city with other people, walking on the same street with other people, riding on the same car, buying goods at the same store, or being fed and sheltered at the same hotel. Men may be in all these positions in civil relations and yet socially be as wide apart as the poles of the moral universe.

"Whether so intended or not, the decision of the court seems to be a concession to a prejudice which belongs to an extinct institution, and places the American people and prejudice which belongs to an extinct institu-tion, and places the American people and government far in the rear of the civilized nations of Europe and of America, for no-where in Europe, and nowhere outside of the United States, can any man be excluded from a hotel or steamboat cabin, or any place of amusement or instruction, simply on account of his color or race. Even in Brazil the only distinction between men arises from the simply on account of his color or race. Even in Brazil the only distinction between men arises from the fact that one is a slave and the other a freeman. A colored freeman has everywhere the same rights in that country as a white freeman. The same condition exists in Mexico, Canada, and other countries. It is one of the marked contradictions and inconsistencies and absurdities of this prejudice that, while it is not offended at the presence of a colored man anywhere as a servant or a slave, it is ever enraged at the presence of a colored man as a gentleman and as an of a colored man as a gentleman and as an equal citizen. I have said that I do not despair on account of this decision. It is contrary to the declaration of independence, trary to the declaration of independence, contrary to the spirit of Christianity, contrary to the spirit of the age, and as I think, in violation of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, and tends directly to make the colored people of the country an aggrieved class, and to weakening that spirit of patriotism which the nation may need for its protection in some perilous hour of need."

In concluding, Mr. Douglass stated that

In cencluding, Mr. Douglass stated that he had not read the arguments in the case or the complete decision, and spoke of the de-cision as he had read it in the afternoon pa.

HON. JOHN M. LANGSTON.
United States minister to Hayti, was found at his residence on College hill, near Howard university. He had been busily engaged all day superintending some alterations about his premises, and had heard nothing whatever of the decision. When he read the brief summary contained in a slip from an afternoon paper which the representative of THE REPUBLICAN handed him, he was deeply interested at once. When he had carefully perused it a second time, he said: "What do you wish me to say?"

repeated as your impressions regarding the

"Anything that you would care to have repeated as your impressions regarding the action of the supreme court?"

"Well, I am painfully surprised, and cannot see the wisdom of the court in nullifying this law of congress, which I had the privilege of preparing. In the winter of 1874 I was requested by Charles Summer to carefully draw a bill by which all citizens should be protected in equal rights on railways and steamboats, and public convoyances, inus, licensed places of public amusement, and public schools. I believe I have the rough notes yet that were used in the preparation of this act of March 1, 1875. Mr. Summer had been ready to sing 'Harvest Home,' believing that everything necessary to the protection of the negro in his newly acquired rights had been accomplished. But I showed him cart loads of law that were hestile to us. The result was the civil rights law. While this law gave to the colored people no rights that they did not possess before its passage, it was that direct legislation necessary to carry into effect the fourteenth amendment, and fully authorized by the fifth section of that article, which declares "congress shall have power to enforce by appropriate legislation for the provisions made us citizens of the United States, and prohibits the states from abridging our privileges or immunities, or denying to us the equal protection of the laws. Now there are two ways in which a state can abridge the rights of its citizens by direct legislation, which places in the hands of railway companies, hotel keepers, &c., the power to deny us those privileges and immunities that are enjoyed by the white race, or by judicial decisions, which are in effect laws to accomplish the same result. It was to prevent just such discrimination that the civil rights bill was drawn and pushed until it became a law. In ratifying the fourteenth amendment the states agreed that congress should provide the means to make the article effective, and the act of March 1, 1875, was simply the exercise of that power by congress.

States the enjoyment of his civil rights under the fourteenth amendment. There are no social privileges conferred by this Murray, U. S. N.

Greenly w, which involves the legality of an order to remain from the federal to the state courts, but denied the same motion in three of the other cases which involve simply the question whother the Virginia tax collector has the legal right to seize personal property for taxes after having refused to take coupons in payment.

In the leval tender case of Inilliard seainst whom they deal the right to stor at a public whom they deal the right to stop at a public inn, with regard to whose proprietors the law is not less explicit or rigid."

Will you care to speak further on this matter before you leave for your post of duty?

'Perhaps I shall. On next Friday evening I have been requested by a number of promi-neut citizens of the district to address a meeting at the Congregational church. I have selected as my theme the present status of the colored American, his relationships and his duties. It is broad enough to comprehend much that is involved in this decision of the highest tribunal in the land, and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land, and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land, and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land, and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land and when I have looked into it a little forther than the land and the lan further I shall, perhaps, have something fur-ther to say. One thing I will say now, how-ever, Mr. Justice Harlan has earned the grat-lfude of the whole colored race for the manly utterances in dissenting from what would otherwise have been the unanimous voice of the supreme court. He has fully justified my estimate of him as an able jurist and a man who will date to be right, even when it is unpopular to do so.

PROP. RICHARD T. GREENER

was found seated in his library. He said:

'This law, which we call the civil rights law, is not only constitutional, but it antedates the constitution. It is a part of the common law—a heritage from our Anglo-Saxon ancestors. It does not put people upon an equality who cannot support that equality. It simply says there shall be no unjust discrimination on account of race or previous condition of servitude. It was the non-enforcement of this law which permitted a venerable negro bishop to be thrust out of a passenger car on a Georgia railway some time ago, after he had complied with all the conditions of a contract by paying for first class fare to the common carrier. This failure to protect citizens in their constitutional rights may result in Archishop McCloskey suffering a similar indignity in some Catholic hating community, or cause those learned and distinguished Hebrews, Mr. Wise or Mr. Adler, to be denied the accommodation of some third rate hotel, because of some anti-Semilic feeling in some sections of our country. It is hardly likely that the men who discussed the civil rights bill in congress for a year before its final passage did not go over all the reasons for and against it that are at all tenable. Why, there are some grave inconsistencies that will confront to be denied the accommodation of some third rate hotel, because of some anti-Semitic feeling in some sections of our country. It is hardly likely that the men who discussed the civil rights bill in congress for a year before its final passage did not go ever all the reasons for and against it that are at all tenable. Why, there are some grave inconsistencies that will confront the supreme court upon the decision of to day. For instance, in the case exparte the commonwealth of Virginia and J. D. Coles, While dissenting from the opinion of the court, Mr. Justice Fieldsaid that the fifteenth amendment, which declares that the right of amoundment, which declares that the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color, or previous condi-tion of servitude, was not material to the question before the court, except as showing that it was only with respect to sufferage that the interdict in terms was placed against leg-

the interdict in terms was placed against legislation on account of race, color, &c., Equality in their civil rights was in other ways secured to persons of the colored race; the ballot being assured to them, the effectual means against unjust legislation was placed in their hands.

"The duty of the colored race was now a positive one. In the light of this decision every colored man with any self respect must continue to demand the fullest protection of the law, both as a man and as an American citizen. The colored people of this country will never forget that the one justice of the supreme court who stood up and dissented on humanitarian and legal grounds against this unjust deciwho stood up and dissented on humanitarian and legal grounds against this unjust decision, came from a southern state, and is a native of Kentucky. The protest of the colored race against this decision will probably not amount to much, but the Anglo-Saxon race respect pluck, and the civilization of the age could not be turned backward even by the supreme court of the United States."

WHAT IT MEANT.

The decision brings to the surface the following incident, which took place in a Washington street car immediately after the passage of the civil rights bill :

Old colored man, addressing a younger negro-"What am dis cibil rights bill any Young negro-"You see, Uncle Cophas, it am jess dis: We niggahs kin go into a car, take a seat wid de white folks, put our feet on de cushins, spit terbacker juice on the floah, an' of enny porr white horrin' sez anything to us, we is privileged to mash his mouf." "Umph," responded the old man; "I thought dere was sum meal an' bacon in the provision. I'm obleged to yer, my son. Nebber under-stood de thing befo'."

An Actor's Board Bill.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15 .- In a suit brought by Lewis and George S. Leland against Edward E. Rice, an actor, well known here and in Philadelphia for a board bill, judgment was ecently obtained against the defendant in the city court. It being learned that the ac-tor was about to leave the city on a theatrical tour after having failed on different occasions to appear on supplementary proceedings, an order was procured requiring him to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. It was returnable to-day, when he failed to appear, and Judge Hawes granted an order fining him $269.85 and costs.

Robbed by Missouri Highwaymen Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 15.—At 11:30 o'clock last night Augustus Lawles, treasurer of the Railway Conductors' association, and Charles Achtenacht, a conductor on the Missouri Pacific railway, were robbed at the muzzle of cocked revolvers by four highwaymuzzie of coeked revolvers by four highway-men on the Kaw river bridge, between Kaneas City and Wyandotte. Lawles was relieved of a $200 watch and $700 of the funds of the association. The robbers escaped. The money taken had been subscribed toward the entertainment of the national convention of railway conductors which opens here on of railway conductors which opens here on Wednesday next.

LATE LOCAL ITEMS.

The poundmaster has taken out warrants against twenty-eight persons who took part in the assault on him and his men near the jail on Saturday last. Mr. Harry Cressford, of Anacostia, acci-

HOW A SAINT LOUND AN LAAND.

The Legend of San Lorence, Near Callag-The Principal Barbor of Peru and the Many Curtons and Interesting Things to be Seen There.

Exected Letter CALLAO, PERU, Sept. 12. - The harber of Callae is formed by a long, low, sandy point which stretches out on the southern side. This point is extended by a shoal, which terminates in a large, rounded one, which is just a wash, and is called the whale's back. Bethe Bogueson, which is bounded on the sea side by the island of San Lorenzo. To the northward there is a straight stretch of coast for twenty miles, where you see the Pescadores, two small rocky islands.

San Lorenze is the quarantine station, and it is a beautiful island. There is not a parti-cle of verdure on it except in one place, near the summit of the highest hill, which, ever since I have been here, has generally been enveloped in fog. The hills extend in the same direction as the island its whole length, same direction as the island its whole length, and are high, the highest being 1,784 feet. You hardly miss verdure when looking at this island, for the earth has so many beautiful shades of brown, yellow, and red that one seen grows fond of watching the trate and seeing them change as the clouds pass over. This is the original home of the white points, and the little areas that I manifold it. and the little green that I mentioned is formed by leaves of this plant, which are growing wild.

within a few feet of a book, looking at you curiously with their big brown eyes, then, giving a snort, disappear. They grow fat and thrive on the numerous schools of fish, two or three of which can be seen nearly every day in some part of the bay. Wherever a seal is fishing several pelicans follow him, and sometimes there are any quantity of them. and sometimes there are any quantity of them Rising on their large wings they some about un-til they see a victim, then rising quite high, they dive into the water head first, with a good deal of force, making the spray fly. Coming quickly to the surface again, they settle down and seem to spend several minutes killing and adjusting the fish in their pouches, then, throwing their heads up, down he slips, and they depart in search of more. he slips, and they depart in search of more. The sea gulls are numberless, but generally they sit on the beaches in long rows, almost hiding the sand. However, if they catch sight of anything they like, or see some of their number swooping down to the water and screaming, they all rise and investigate, making a great hubbub. Then there are fish hawks that seem to hunt in flocks, and descend upon their prey in a manner that reminds you more of lead dropping in a shot tower than anything else that I know of. They have been having yellow fever here pretty badly, but it was chiefly among the Chilian troops, and has about disappeared, although a fresh case every now and then makes some of the doctors think an epidemic is sure to come in the summer, but they, of is sure to come in the summer, but they, of course, cannot be certain, and the Chilians are straining every nerve to keep the place clean and healthy. At one time they had disinfectant spread all over the streets, and burned barrels of tar morning and evening at the street corners, but that is no longer at the street corners, but that is no longer necessary.

Callao is a great point for the termination of steamship lines, having two to Europe and numberless ones up and down the coast, all of which makes it a thriving place, and last month the custom house receipts were nearly $500,000, which must have delighted the hearts of the Chilians, although, of course, they would not be as large if these people had not made the import duties much larger than formerly, and levied export duties besides.

rillos, and the other for the American line which runs to Lima and Chicla. There are several pretty plazas in Callao, two of which have little gardens in them and have seats about outside. The streets a North American would hardly admire at first, they are so parrow and dusty and the sides of the one narrow and dusty, and the sides of the one storied houses facing the street look very unpromising, although, of course, you cannot by them judge of the interiors.

Lima, with her many quaint church towers trees, and houses looks beautifully as it lies in the sunshine on sloping ground seven miles distant, and near the foot of the mountains, which here run near the coast. My eyes often turn toward it with pleasure, and I anticipate spending many days there ex-ploring the nooks and corners.

"What will be the effect of this decision?"
"Only this. As citizons we have the right under the old common law to bring an action in the state courts against anyone who denies us the privileges extended to any citizen of that state. We are all equal before the law, and if it is shown, as it perhaps will be, but the states have either by legislation or judicial decisions discriminated against us, the quost on will be brought squarely before congress to determine what legislation will be required to secure to the citizen of a state and the United States the enjoyment of his civil rights

Chilian flags float over the place, and one must admire it for it is so pretty. It consists of one red and one white horizontal stripe and ours the Chilian is the handsomest.
